

>>> My life at the Authority...

Rebecca Coe: Assistant Investigator

>>> What are your main duties?

To provide support in taking appropriate action to deal with breaches of the law relating to: insurance, pensions, banking, fiduciary services, fund administration and management, investment management, anti-money laundering and countering the financing of terrorism, and designated businesses. This includes conducting enforcement investigations.

>>> What are the most important qualities you need in your role?

Essential qualities within the Enforcement Division are integrity, professionalism, respect, accountability and having the drive to achieve excellence. Effective enforcement action helps the Authority to meet its three regulatory objectives: protecting customers; reducing financial crime; and maintaining confidence in the Isle of Man as a responsible and well-regulated international finance centre.

>>> What do you enjoy most about working for the Authority?

The Authority provides lots of opportunities for growth and development. Working for the regulator offers the satisfaction of knowing that you are contributing to the protection and reputation of the Island. There is a good culture within the office and it is an enjoyable, sociable and comfortable environment to work in.

>>> How does the Authority support your professional development?

The Authority encourages and supports all staff seeking to pursue relevant professional qualifications to develop their career. Since joining in 2019, I have attained the ICA International Diploma in Governance, Risk and Compliance, and also the Advanced Certificate in Investigative Practice to increase relevant knowledge for my enforcement role. Support for personal wellbeing is also provided through sessions on lifestyle and health matters.

>>> What advice would you give to someone who wants to work for the Authority?

Working for the Authority provides a wide knowledge set of the financial services sector, not just from a regulatory perspective, and opens up an abundance of opportunities for your future career. The Authority also has a great work-life balance, with flexibility to suit most circumstances.
